<tr>
<td>Description:</td>
<td>Washington STEM launched an initiative called STEM-PD in 2013 to equip teachers with technology from IRIS Connect and the supporting tools and resources to overcome these logistical challenges. The technology enables teachers to have high-quality professional development and take control of their own learning. Currently in its third year, they are collaborating with educators in 42 schools across Washington to integrate this technology into schools' existing PD activities.</td>

<td>Description:</td>
<td>Washington State Leadership and Assistance for Science Education Reform (LASER) is a public/private partnership launched in 1999 using a science education reform model developed by the Smithsonian Science Education Center (formerly the National Science Resources Center). The Washington State LASER partnership is led by the Science and Education Division of Pacific Science Center in Seattle and the Office of STEM Education at the Pacific Northwest National Laboratory. Pacific Science Center serves as the fiscal agent for the partnership and manages LASER’s statewide technical assistance efforts.</td>

| Description: | With a growing STEM skills gap in Washington state, this legislation could not be timelier. A recent report* found that there are currently 25,000 unfilled jobs in Washington due to lack of qualified candidates. That number could grow to 50,000 by 2017 with the majority in STEM fields.
*Boston Consulting Group
OSPI is one of many organizations in Washington, and nationwide, working to improve STEM literacy. |
